The Reddest Red Yet.

Going to paint your barn this summer? What color? We have all colors in Monarch Paint, but we are thinking of red now.

There are several ways you can go about to get red paint for your barn.

You can buy red dry and mix it up with oil, but you'll get mighty tired before you get it done. You'll have to strain it to get out the lumps, and even then you won't get it absolutely smooth. It won't hold its gloss either.

Another way is, to buy a low priced pig in the bag paint because it is low priced.

Here's another one and a safe one-USE RED SCHOOL HOUSE PAINT-Its made of Bright Red Oxide, a beautiful shade that won't lade, durable, glossy, permanent, "The reddest red yet." We guarantee it for five years, it lasts longer.

It ought to sell at $1.25, but we are making a run on it at $1.00 per gallon.

Last year we sold a lot of it. We'll sell more in 1905.

the Battlefield. From the United Service

The Russian Surgeon Z. von Manteufel has sent a communication to the Revue Medicale Hebdomadaire, of St. Petersburg, concerning the wounds he has had occasion to treat during the war. Most of the wounds in the head were cured, but some of them gave rise to interesting cases of asphasia and agraphia, or the generally, though not always, recovered. The wounds in the abdomen frequently resulted in peritonitis, more especially when the removal of the wounded had taken place too quickly, or had been effected by means of badly hung military circumscribed a cure generally followed; but where it was greatly extended the issue was fatal. Laparotomy, n.ore particularly when the surgical operation was performed on the field of battle, was found to be worse than useless. Wounds
